

The Woodbury Window

Created by kids, for kids

This summer, budding writers and illustrators will get a chance have their work published in a student created newspaper!

The Woodbury Window, a newspaper for kids and teens, aims to create a platform for young writers to exercise their journalistic skills. The newspaper is "by kids, for kids," and welcomes pieces covering a breadth of subjects. Run through the Woodbury Public Library, the Window is a fun way for kids to keep up their reading and writing over the summer. The final product will be published either online or in print at the end of the summer.

Woodbury Window Editor Sydney Kim is a rising senior at the Spence School. She loves reading and is the Entertainment Editor, as well as a writer and artist, for her school newspaper, The Voice. She loves studying Latin and Ancient Greek. Additionally, she enjoys participating in her school's theater company, chamber choir, and visual arts program.

Stories and artwork by grades K—8 can be submitted to woodburykidsnews@biblio.org or in person at the Library.
